Urinary diversions, cancer treatments and chemotherapy are known to cause adverse changes to bone and metabolic health. Dr. Kendall Moseley, Clinical Director of the Division of Diabetes, Endocrinology and Metabolism and Medical Director of the Johns Hopkins Metabolic Bone and Osteoporosis Center will share insights and expertise on how patients can keep their bodies strong given a cancer diagnosis.

DECEMBER 2024

I WISH I HAD ASKED THAT!

DECEMBER 10 | 4:00-5:00 PM

Join Johns Hopkins University Distinguished Service Professor of Breast Cancer Lillie Shockney, R.N., M.A.S., HON-ONN-CG with Greenberg Institute Co-Founder Stephanie Cooper Greenberg for a lively conversation about how to be a better patient and ask the right questions.

Lillie is recognized across the cancer field, especially for her work in navigation, survivorship, patient-centered care, preservation of quality of life, end-of-life planning and care, improving the cancer patient's experience, and clinical outcomes. As a breast cancer survivor, she will share how to empower our community to ask the right questions for better outcomes.
